Will County Registration Days October 13 and 17

Registration of voters is now on in Will County. Supervisors and election officials are in charge of the registration. After the voters have been registered in the poll books, the same will hang outside the polling places where anyone can go and see if their name is registered. If one is a new comer into a community, they should especially take time to see if their name is in the book. If it is not, they may write it in the book or the name of their friend if they have noticed it does not appear.

Work Begun On Frankfort WPA Project

Work has begun on the village of Frankfort WPA water main extension project. New water mains will be laid on the following streets: on Minnesota street from Locust to Maple St.; on Locust St., from Minnesota St., to California St.; on California St., from Locust St., to Maple St. This comprises the extension on the west side of the village.

On the north side extension mains will be laid on Smith St., from Elwood St., to Bowen St.; on Bowen St., from Smith St., to Carpenter street.

The total cost of the project is to be $11,268.31 and of this amount the village pays $520.00, the balance will be paid by a government grant.

This noteworthy improvement will give Frankfort an adequate water supply within the incorporated limits of the village.

New Lenox Band To Play at Rally

A Republican Rally will be held in the Colonial hall in New Lenox Monday night October 12, commencing at 8 o'clock. An outstanding feature of the evening's program will be a band concert by the New Lenox school band between the hours of 7 and 8.

There will also be music and songs by the Arkansas Travelers and special dancing by the popular team of Lorraine Schultz and Judith Wackendorfer. Speakers will outline national and state issues and the Republican county candidates will be present. Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

Orland Boy's Arm Impaled On Nail

While Bobby Miller, son of Mrs. Fred Miller of Orland Park, was playing football Monday evening, he slid into an old board fence and a projecting nail entered his right elbow. He was unable to release his arm from the nail until Mr. Yates, in whose neighborhood the accident had occurred, removed the nail with a pair of pliers. The injured boy was taken to the office of Dr. Snyder in Blue Island who gave him a serum to check any poisoning. Bobby is none the worse for this experience and is back in school again.

To Hold Special Band Meeting At Mokena

Plans are going forward for the dinner and Republican rally to be held by the Women's Auxiliary on October 21st in the Lion's Club

MURDERER GIVES SELF UP AT FRANKFORT

Walter Pfaff, village clerk of Frankfort, had the surprise of his life, last Friday evening, when Byron Richards, aged 50, from Joliet, walked into the Pfaff's barber shop and told Mr. Pfaff that he had killed a man in Joliet and wanted Pfaff to call the sheriff, as he wanted to give himself up.

It appears that Richards, while crazy drunk, fatally stabbed his friend Thomas F. Reilly of Joliet who died in St. Joseph's hospital shortly after. According to Richard's story to Pfaff, he went to the Rock Island railroad yards Thursday night and slept in a box car. Friday morning he walked around the yards and in the afternoon got a newspaper and read where Reilly was dead. He then hitch-hiked a ride with an auto driver and got off near Frankfort, on route 45 which enters the village on the south.

He tried to commit suicide by slashing his wrists in a field near Frankfort but the attempt was unsuccessful.

While Richards told Pfaff that he was a murderer, Pfaff at first thought he was joking and said that he saw the man whom Richards had killed, walking up the street. But Richards stuck to his story and the sheriff's office was called and he was taken into custody by the deputy sheriffs and brought back to the county jail in Joliet.

White Store Is 17 Years Old

A 17th anniversary sale is being held at the White Store, 305-307-309 Cass street, which started Tuesday and will continue 20 days to Monday October 26, with a daily program of special bargains, entertainment, and food demonstrations.

J. J. Cohen, who founded the White Store, "The Store That Friends Built"—in October, 1919, said that his anniversary sale beginning this week will feature the greatest bargains he has ever offered. Prices, he said, will be slashed on quality goods in all departments.

Food demonstrations will be conducted during the sale by Swift & Co., Maxwell House Coffee, Sunkist Orange Co., Kraft Co., Loose Wiles Biscuit, Q. Products, Armour & Co., Climalene, Lipton's Tea, French Bakery, Thomas J. Webb Co., T. A. Snider Co., Libby, McNeil & Libby and other firms.

Mr. Cohen said he will serve a cake weighing 1,000 pounds, to all children in the store on a certain day of the sale. Entertainment, to be offered every morning, afternoon and evening, will include dancing, singing, music, impersonations and exhibitions by "Chimpanzee, the monkey man". Novelties will be given to children, and there will be pie eating contest.

The gala sale will celebrate the progress of the White Store in the 17 years since Mr. Cohen established his store in an 18 by 40-foot space at 405 Cass street, with two assistants. The space was enlarged from time to time until in 1925 it was said to have the largest frontage of any store in Joliet. In 1930 Mr. Cohen moved the White Store to 305 Cass street, where nearly 100 persons are employed today, on four selling floors.

Sound Movie Coming to Mokena

A Movement is on foot to provide weekly moving pictures at Mokena school auditorium every week. The initial show featuring sound film moving picture, "The Hoosier School Master" will be presented at the Mokena High school auditorium next Wednesday night October 14 at 7:30 o'clock CST. The latest in sound equipment will be used in these shows. The local school board has thoroughly investigated this proposition and is satisfied it is of a high class nature.

If the show draws a good patronage, the show will follow weekly, it is understood.

Mokena Village Dad Prize Plane Bomb Dropper

Mr. Geo. Koeller, prominent Mokena garage man, and village trustee took first prize last Sunday in a bomb dropping contest put on by the Pilot's Club of South Bend, Indiana at the Bendix Airport in that city.

The contest consisted of flying to a height of one thousand feet and dropping a two-pound flour bomb at a mark on the ground. Mr. Koeller came within two feet, four inches from the center of the target. The one nearest to his bomb was six feet away.

Mr. Koeller flew his Welch Monoplane.

house in Midlothian.

The next regular meeting of the organization will be held at headquarters Friday Oct. 16 at 8 p. m.

Hundreds Attend G. O. P. Rally At Mokena

The inspiring and old time Republican meeting spirit is emphasized by the G. O. P. rally held in the St. John Evangelical church parlors, Wednesday evening.

A musical program was furnished by the Arkansas Travelers, Adolph Pizzo, accordion player, and the dance team of Lorraine Schultz and Judith Wackendorfer, and received hearty applause for their dance act.

One E. McGovney served as local chairman and after making the opening announcement the meeting was turned over to Hays Kennedy of Joliet as Master of ceremonies.

Departing from the usual procedure, the county candidates, as well as the legislative candidates, were called upon first for remarks before the national part of the program began.

Paul V. Wunder, Republican candidate for Circuit Clerk received a very hearty ovation when he appeared on the platform. Mr. Wunder has been ill all summer and is now able to be about and his many friends in Mokena were very glad to see him.

Other candidates who made brief speeches were: W. W. Smith, Rep. candidate for the re-election to the office of Recorder of Deeds, Thomas J. Sprague, candidate for Auditor, Dr. E. C. Kingston, candidate for coronor; Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Niell and Warren Wood seeking re-election as representatives of this district for the state legislature.

At the conclusion of this part of the program, Mr. Harvey Wood, former mayor of Joliet and prominent in Republican political circles, gave a very interesting address in which he referred to many statistical figures to which the new deal policies were impractical. Mr. Wood said that on one case when he was called to Washington in connection with the triple A program for the milk producers of this district, Tugwell and several other of the New Deal cabinet, told him they were not interested in restoring employment or aiding the farmers until their programs were completed for a re-socialization of the country.

Mr. Wood confined his talk chiefly picking the record of Henry Horner, Governor of Illinois, to pieces. He said that Horner had been taking orders from Washington instead of letting the state govern itself.

Mr. Wood pointed out that the coming election is the most momentous one to come before the American voters for many years.

He also attacked the sales tax, in which he showed the figures from state records that the state had received over $60,000,000.00 a year in sales tax instead of $12,000,000 real estate tax, abolished by the state. Mr. Wood declared the record showed that the total state expenditures during the past four fiscal years have been $647,136,000.00, instead of $566,683,000.00. In other words, $80,453,000.00 more than the Horner administration is telling the public anything about.

The speaker spoke for nearly an hour on the record of the Democratic party in the State of Illinois, showing how they were dictated to by Democratic Administrator Hopkins in Washington, and the Kelly-Nash outfit in Cook County. Congressman Chauncey Reed who is seeking reelection on the Republican ticket, gave a very graphic account of the issues of the rubber stamp congress. He pointed out in very plain words how the rubber stamp congress functioned. Instead of the congressmen passing legislation they received bills for passage with the notification that they must be passed and they were passed by a supine congress. Especially did Mr. Reed decry of the fact that congress placed an amount of over four billion dollars in the hands of President Roosevelt without raising any commotion. Mr. Reed said that the functions of government must be restored to the representatives by the election and sent to Washington to make our laws and not to let one man dictate the policies of the entire nation.

James A. Bell of Joliet, gave a very vigorous exposition of the fact that reemployment and other things will bring about better conditions and return to prosperity. Mr. Bell emphasized the fact that such noted Democrats as Al Smith, Bainbridge Colb, Gov. Eli and James Reed have quit the New Dealers cold Hays Kennedy also spoke briefly at the close of the rally. Refreshments were served. The Mokena rally was one of the best of the Republican meetings held in Will County during the present campaign.

ILLINOIS
BREVITIES

Clyde Liggett of Rock Island was elected president of the Illinois State Grotto association at Danville.

Henry Peck, ninety-three, regarded as the oldest native born resident of Ottawa, died. Peck voted for Abraham Lincoln for President in 1864.

William Skelly, twenty, of De Kalb, and Gladys French, seventeen, of Waterman, were killed when their automobile struck a culvert a mile west of Waterman on route 71.

Hubert J. Hilliard, sixty-one, mayor of Ottawa from 1927 to 1935, and the first man to engage in business as an automobile dealer and garage operator in that city, died following a long illness.

Circuit Judge Roy Pearce of Fairfield denied a motion to quash an indictment charging James O'Neil, former township supervisor, with embezzlement and set his trial for October 19.

William K. Keig, seventy-three, founder of the Keig-Stevens Baking company, and a prominent figure in Rockford's business and civic life for almost half a century, fell dead of heart disease on the street.

George Latta, race-horse owner, was shot and killed at the Mercer county fair grounds in Aledo following a quarrel which witnesses testified he engaged in with Ralph Egbert and the latter's son, Lawrence, of Toulon, Ill. The Egberts were held for questioning in the Mercer county jail. Both Latta and Egbert owned and raced horses at the Mercer county fair grounds.

Miss Blanche Shrader, thirty-five years old, of Shabbona, a music teacher in the Rockford schools, who was found dead in eighteen inches of water, in the Fox river, near Montgomery, Kendall county, on August 14, was murdered by a person or persons who then sought to give her death the appearance of suicide. Such was the verdict of a coroner's jury at Yorkville.

A Circuit court jury in Galesburg found Leroy Hunter, thirty-eight, guilty of manslaughter in connection with the death last July 6 of Clinton H. Walker, forty-four, a painter. Prosecution witnesses testified that Hunter beat Walker's head against the foundation of his house. Hunter was sentenced to serve from one to fourteen years in the penitentiary.

One man was killed and another was seriously injured when a heavy skylight they were installing on a sloping roof of the American Steel and Wire company mill in Joliet slipped and caused them to lose their balance. John Kemp, forty-eight years old, of Olean, N. Y., fell 85 feet to his death. Oscar H. Clausen, thirty-eight, of Pittsburgh, suffered fractures of the right leg and arm and internal injuries.

Miss Sarah Beasley, twenty-year-old maid in a wealthy home in Signal Hills, East St. Louis suburb, admitted in Belleville, assistant States Attorney Fred J. Bier said, she acted as "cashier" for a bandit gang in twelve holdups. She was given a six-month sentence on a charge of vagrancy. Bier said Miss Beasley named four men as members of a gang which specialized in victimizing young couples parked beside highways in automobiles.

Mrs. Clara Reiman, fifty-five and comely, was arrested at her farm home ten miles northwest of Murphysboro on a warrant charging her with poisoning her husband, Will, a middle-aged farmer. The murder warrant was issued after an analysis of the contents of Reiman's stomach. The analysis, according to Sheriff Ross Ozburn of Jackson county, showed five and forty-five-one-hundredths grains of arsenic.

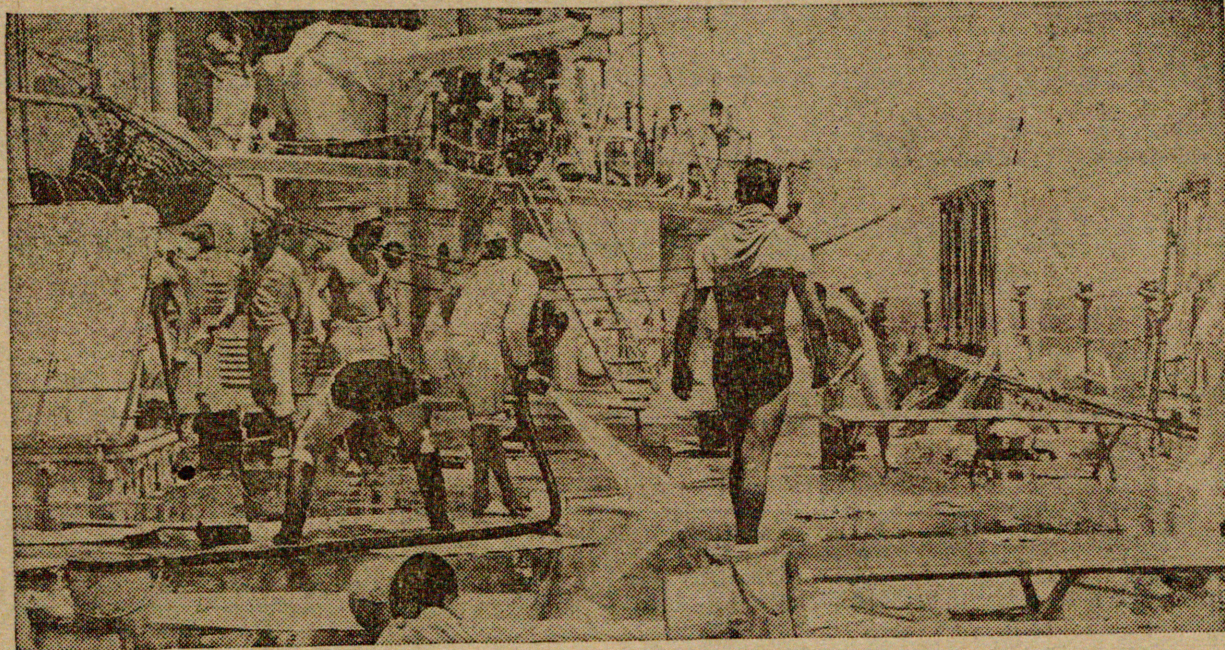

Judge Frank E. Shopen, sole member of the City court of Elgin since 1915, died of a heart attack in the Sherman hospital at Elgin. Judge Shopen was sixty-seven years old. He was born in Lily Lake, Kane county, and, after being admitted to the bar forty-one years ago, spent his entire career in Elgin. He was a former member of the board of education, and a former president of the Old Settlers' association. His widow, Mary, survives him.

Six men, including Fire Chief Frank Owen and Police Chief Harry Reynolds, were recovering from fighting a fire in Streator that swept through two large store and office buildings, causing damage estimated by Chief Owen at $175,000. Breaking out in a drug store on Main street in the heart of the business district, the blaze burned fiercely for more than twelve hours. The police and fire chiefs were injured by an explosion that occurred in a building occupied by the S. S. Kresge company and a number of offices.

Mrs. Mary C. Sharp, ninety-five years old, believed by friends to have been one of eight surviving Civil war nurses in the nation, died at the home of her granddaughter, Mrs. A. D. Doyle in Clinton. She was born in Vera, the daughter of John Wren.

The Illinois emergency drouth committee adopted a recommendation that the federal government finance the construction of all-weather farm-to-market roads as a work relief project for farmers in counties hard hit by heat and drouth.

BEHOLD THE STORY

THE END OF JERRY'S SUSPICIONS.

JERRY MUSKRAT, caught by a leg between two roots struggled in vain to free himself. Some one was coming down the Laughing Brook. Jerry knew who it was. Yes, sir, Jerry knew who it was. It was Farmer Brown's Boy. Jerry knew by the whistle. You see, Farmer Brown's Boy is apt to whistle when he is happy.

The knowledge that it was Farmer Brown's Boy brought no relief to Jerry Muskrat. He was suspicious of every human being, and all because a stranger had first won Jerry's friendship and then set traps for him. Such an act is called treachery, and one who had once met with treachery is likely to be filled with suspicion for a long time afterward.

Nearer and nearer came Farmer Brown's Boy, and harder and harder Jerry struggled. But Jerry's struggles were in vain. Do what he would, he couldn't get that leg free. Suddenly he stopped struggling and

"I've got a lot of respect for those big teeth of yours," thought he, and threw his coat right over Jerry. "Now," he added, "I guess I can get that trap off your leg without getting bitten."

He stooped to look for the trap, and then as he saw that it wasn't a trap that held Jerry he gave a little whistle of surprise. Out came his knife, and while Jerry struggled helplessly under the coat Farmer Brown's Boy began cutting one of the roots which held Jerry. In a couple of minutes that root was cut through.

Farmer Brown's Boy snatched up his coat and stepped back. Jerry was free. He could hardly believe it, but it was so. He didn't stop to thank Farmer Brown's Boy, but scurried away for home as fast as he could go. Once there, he began lay perfectly still. In his heart was a faint hope that Farmer Brown's Boy would not see him.

But Farmer Brown's Boy did see him. He stopped whistling. He stood still. Then a look of anger passed over his face. "I must have overlooked a trap," he muttered, "and that poor little chap has stepped in it. It's a lucky thing I came along just now. How I do hate traps! If a trapper could put himself in the place of one of his victims for even a few minutes I guess he would never set another trap."

Farmer Brown's Boy once more began to move toward Jerry, and as he did so he took off his coat. Jerry drew himself together to spring as best he could at Farmer Brown's Boy as soon as he was near enough. Jerry felt quite hopeless, but he intended to fight to the last.

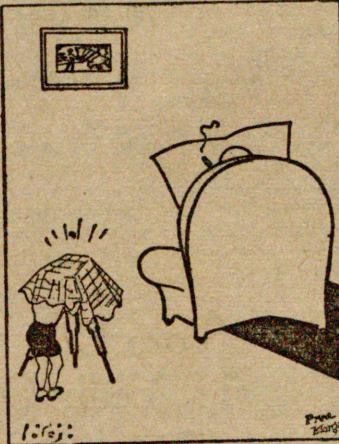

The eyes of Farmer Brown's Boy twinkled for he understood just what Jerry intended to do. That was why he had taken off his coat.

FINE DINNER DISHES

THERE is no dinner dish that is more popular, if we except chicken, than ham.

Fig Cake.

Beat three egg whites with one-half cupful of sugar and add a teaspoonful of vanilla. Beat three egg yolks with one-half cupful of sugar, the grated rind of an orange, a teaspoonful of baking powder sifted twice with a cupful of flour, add three tablespoonfuls of orange juice and fold in the egg mixture. Melt four tablespoonfuls of butter in a cakepan, add one-half cupful of brown sugar, one cupful of chopped figs and a sprinkling of broken pecans. Pour over this the cake mixture and bake twenty minutes in a moderate oven. When done turn upside down and serve with whipped cream. Stewed apricots, canned pineapple or any fruit desired may be used for this delicious cake dessert.

Baked Ham.

Soak a ham over night. In the morning put it into a kettle with one onion, one carrot, six pepper corns, one bay leaf, six cloves and water to cover. Simmer for three or four hours until tender. Remove the skin and stick with whole cloves; bake in a roasting pan basting with the ham liquor and cider, using half of each. When the ham is well done stir some brown sugar into the cider sauce and spread all over the ham and brown. Serve hot with the liquor from the pan for sauce.

Deviled Lobster.

Cook three tablespoonfuls of onion, one tablespoonful of green pepper, three tablespoonfuls of butter very slowly until tender. Add one and one-half cupfuls of lobster meat and sprinkle with two tablespoonfuls of flour, one teaspoonful each of mustard, salt and paprika to taste, with a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce and a cupful of cream. Cook a minute or two. Place in ramekins or shells and bake well covered with buttered crumbs.

YES MEN

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

LIKE you I've had a man or two At times in my employ, And, when they tried to please me, then

They would be the most annoy. With me they always would agree, Agree with might and main; Advice from them at any price I never could obtain.

Like you I've wished a man or two Would let their light so shine, Suggest some way they thought was best,

Some way that wasn't mine. No matter what I mentioned, that Was just the very thing; Right then that crew of chorus men Would all arise and sing.

Like you I'd like a man or two To say that I'm a mess. Although I know I'm not, I know I'm sick and tired of yes. For now they never tell me how My plan is not so good. I'd hire (and very likely fire) A few who only would.

THE LANGUAGE OF YOUR HAND

By Leicester K. Davis
© Public Ledger, Inc.

WE SHALL begin our study of the language of the hand by consideration of fundamental elements. It is important that these be thoroughly mastered before progressing to the more complicated meanings of line and mounts within the palm. Study of hands by type is the first step toward proficiency in this age-old and fascinating science of character delineation.

The shape and structure of the hand instantly places it within one of seven classifications. Each type may be relied upon as a definite index of the possessor's major traits and tendencies.

The seven types are:

First. The Primal Type, the hand of the materially minded.

Second. The Square Type, the hand of the doer of worth-while things.

Third. The Mental Type, the hand of the brain worker and philosopher.

Fourth. The Temperamental Type, the hand of the born actor, artist, poet or musician.

Fifth. The Spatulate Type, the hand of the nervous, highly strung creative man or woman.

Sixth. The Spiritual Type, the hand of the man or woman who lives on a high idealistic plane.

Seventh. The Intermingled Type, which partakes of several or all of the qualities found in the types just given, as illustrated above.

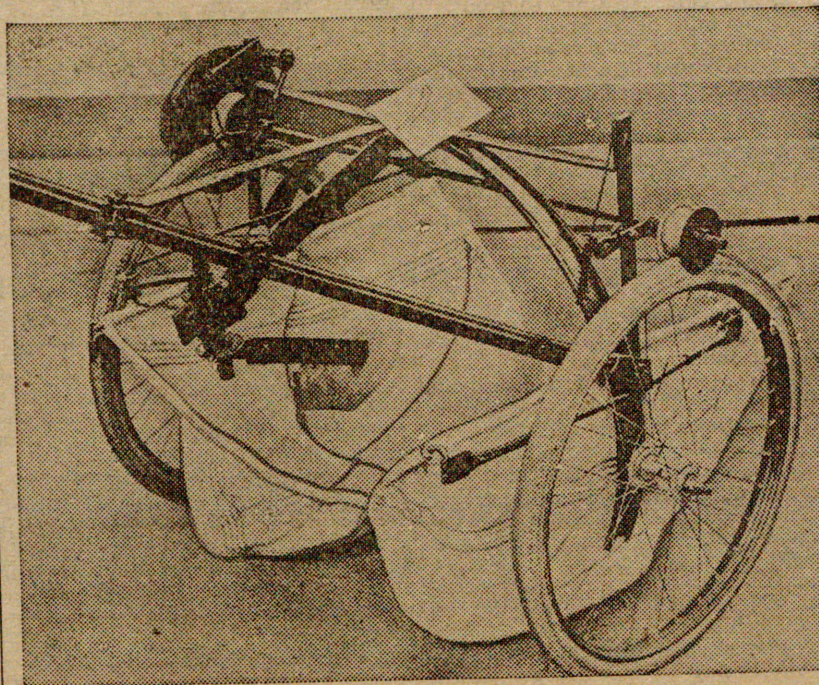

Fix these classifications and the qualities represented by each firmly in mind. These lessons which follow will describe the elements by which each type may be quickly recognized.

Heat in Moon's Rays

Moonlight is reflected light from the sun. Rays of the sun falling on the moon set up heat there, which is immediately radiated away into space, because the moon has no atmosphere to hold the heat on its surface. The reflected light reaching the earth as moonlight does set up some heat on the earth, but the amount is so small that it can only be detected by delicate instruments.

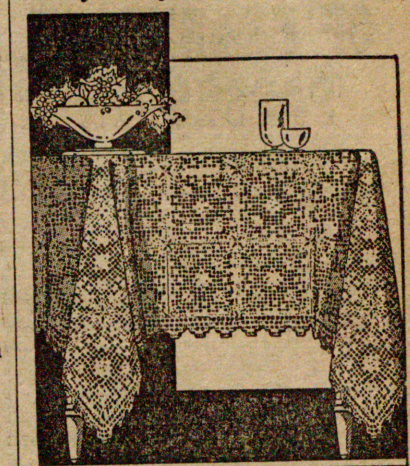

Made to Catch French Potato Bugs

This novel invention for catching potato bugs was recently demonstrated for the first time at the famous Concours Lepine in Paris. The wheels run in the furrows, straddling the plants so that the two bags drag along the ground on each side of the plants. The blade in the center swings back and forth, knocking the insects into the bags.

Be Sure They Properly Cleanse the Blood

YOUR kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as nature intended—fail to remove impurities that poison the system when retained. Then you may suffer nagging backache, dizziness, scanty or too frequent urination, getting up at night, puffiness under the eyes, feel nervous, miserable—all upset.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart
National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—Mr. Secretary Morgenthau lately has gone into the money market to borrow approximately one billion dollars. He asked the banks and other people having idle money to purchase four hundred millions in new government bonds and at the same time asked them to extend loans totalling about $550,000,000 that matured on September 15. The maturing securities, of course, do not take new money out of the money market, but it is borrowing just the same despite the technical name of refunding.

The Treasury's action in borrowing such a huge sum at this time came as a surprise. To many financial authorities, in fact to most of them, there was no need for borrowing additional funds at this time. It was a circumstance in which, as far as most observers could see, the Treasury had idle money in sufficient amount to meet the needs for the next several months.

Aside from the fact that the Secretary's action results in an increase in the public debt by the amount of new money borrowed, it is a matter deserving more than passing attention — much more attention than Treasury borrowings heretofore. The reason is that the administration is again piling up in the Treasury a huge amount of idle funds. As nearly as I can calculate the results of the September borrowings, the Treasury will be left with a mere $1,700,000 in unused cash. Of course, to the Roosevelt administration which has dealt only in billions, this sum may not appear important. Mr. Morgenthau said it was necessary to have these funds available because of "unsettled conditions" abroad. But that answer, to me, does not suffice.

I recognize that most people find little interest in discussing Treasury financial policies. I know from the type of letters that I get from those who do me the honor to read these reports that the subject of Treasury finance seems far removed from anything in which they can possibly have an interest. But notwithstanding those facts, I feel the matter should be discussed in every section of the country because it directly touches every taxpayer; and that is of vital importance.

Here is how it affects the taxpayer and when I refer to the taxpayer I refer to every individual in this country, because all of us are paying taxes either directly or indirectly: When the Treasury arranges a cash balance, it provides funds upon which the various government agencies may draw in accordance with congressional appropriations. To that extent it is like money you deposit in a bank. But otherwise it is quite different. The cash balance in the Treasury lies idle. It brings no return, no profit to anybody.

But it is important to remember that there are only two ways in which the Treasury can get money for this cash balance, namely, by borrowing or by taxing you and me. During the Roosevelt administration the Treasury has borrowed about $2.12 for every dollar it has collected in taxes. The result is a gigantic public debt.

There is another result, however, that is not as apparent to individuals. Since the Treasury is borrowing money it has to pay interest on what it borrows. You and I are paying this interest in the form of additional taxes. So, therefore, not alone are we being taxed for the money that is spent and which must be repaid, but we are being taxed to pay the interest on idle funds.

Mr. Morgenthau's reference to unsettled conditions abroad directs attention to what is happening in Europe and Asia and the link that exists between those conditions and our own.

President Roosevelt lately has said on several occasions that he did not like to be away from Washington more than four or five days at a time because of those unsettled conditions. Every one knows that our foreign friends are rearming. I believe every one realizes as well, however, that each of those foreign nations is in a position where it cannot initiate hostilities. At least, each one is in a position where very great provocation must occur before it can justify the starting of a war in the eyes of nations like our own.

Any one who wishes to examine those unsettled conditions will find at the very bottom two types of propaganda. One comes from Russia, the other from Germany. The two types of propagandists, while violently hating each other, are preaching exactly the same sort of thing. They are telling the world that if the world wants peace it must align itself with one or the other of the two schools of thought, depending upon which type of propaganda you read. With circumstances like that going on abroad, it seems to me that we as Americans ought to realize fully—and ought to defend—the type of government that we have. Neither Stalin nor Hitler preaches our type of economic thought. In view of that, Americans surely ought to tighten their girdle and take a definite stand for the preservation of our traditions, our practices, because it is under those traditions and practices that our nation has grown great.

I have been a little bit disappointed that Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Secretary Hull of the State department have not preached the American doctrine at more length. I am sure pronouncements by them in condemnation of communism or fascism would find a hearty response at the hands of the American people.

It is to be recognized that changes take place in world economic and political thought. They are taking place in our country. More are coming. But I condemn the practices of communism and fascism because they have ruined the lives of all excepting a few people in every nation where those policies are operative. They will destroy the independence of thought and action, the happiness, that we have come to know in this country as a natural right.

In negotiations with foreign powers, Mr. Roosevelt has not been fortunate. I think it is generally agreed among observers that the President fumbled the ball when he failed to take advantage of a splendid opportunity to deal with France and Great Britain when he first became President. Likewise, I know there are many students who are convinced that the President by his own acts broke up the London economic conference in the summer of 1933 and with the collapse of that London meeting went any hope for an early recovery from the depression on a world basis.

The war debts question still hangs in mid air. The recognition of Russia I am convinced turned out to be a fizzle. The far eastern program, if there was a program, has yielded nothing because it must be said in truth we have not cemented our friendship with Japan.

Within the last few days we have seen the collapse of the French currency. We have seen the President join with Great Britain in co-operating with the French in their difficulty. Yet, it is apparent to anyone who will review the financial and economic history of the last three years that the French have made a great effort to remain on the gold standard—and they had no help from us until they could no longer stand the strain.

It is always easier to use hindsight than foresight. It is easier as well to call attention to mistakes three years after those mistakes have been made than to take a bold stand when the errors were first discussed. These facts, however, do not in any way lighten the responsibility that was ours as a nation in 1933.

I refer again to the London economic conference and the events prior to it in 1933. There were plenty of men in the United States at that time who said openly that the United States should move quickly and take leadership in world stabilization of currencies. It appeared for a time that President Roosevelt would take that action but instead he is charged with having broken up the London conference because he failed to assume that leadership which he could have had.

That brings us to the link between the United States and the conditions of Europe. Mr. Roosevelt, through Secretary Morgenthau, says now that the United States will stand with Great Britain in helping the French. The question naturally arises why did not the United States stand with France in 1933 when France and a half dozen other European nations wanted to remain on the gold standard for its currency.

Personally, I have never seen any reason why the United States should have devalued its dollar as was done. If we had not devalued, one thing is quite certain: Maintenance of the gold standard by the United States would have continued to strengthen the currency of those countries in Europe, including France, that desired to continue that currency basis.

I have heard it said as well that if the United States had remained on the gold standard instead of devaluing its dollar, Great Britain would have been able soon to have restored her currency to a gold basis. Certainly, the British could not have remained off of gold as long as they have if gold coin were allowed to circulate in the United States. I believe no one can forecast at this time exactly what the results of the French devaluation will be.

Nothing You Can Do

By STANLEY CORDELL
© Associated Newspapers.—WNU Service.

"IGNORANCE," said Charlie Kemp, "is an intelligent man's greatest enemy. Ignorance in another person, I mean. It's the one thing that the tutored mind can never successfully combat. If he's wise, he'll not try, unless, of course, fate forces him into the conflict. Like in the case of Jim Wilson."

"Jim was an intelligent youth. Well educated, well mannered, bred of a good family and with many brilliant ancestors along the line. The kid, being unusually smart, was quite successful by the time he'd reached thirty. Reason for it chiefly was because in all his dealings he had associated with intelligent men, men who spoke his own language and whom he understood. He'd never met an ignorant person until he came in contact with Mrs. Patterson."

"Mrs. Patterson was the mother of Brenda Patterson, and Brenda Patterson happened to be the young lady with whom Jim fell in love. Before he married her, he came to know vaguely that her folks were different, rather loud talkers and coarse in their ways. But he never paid them much heed; he figured he was marrying Brenda, not the family."

"The young folks settled down in a residential community not far from Boynton, and close to Jim's place of business. At first he didn't mind when the Pattersons began dropping in on them. It was only natural that they display an interest in the welfare of their daughter. But gradually he began to know a faint annoyance. The Pattersons lacked even the rudiments of good taste, good manners, or the correct use of the English language. Some sort of understanding might have become necessary if it hadn't happened that Jim was forced to spend a lengthy period traveling in the interest of his business. He and Brenda talked the matter over, decided to give up their apartment and travel by auto."

"The young couple spent six months touring about the United States, and then, upon returning to Massachusetts, were invited by Jim's folks to remain at the ancestral homestead, a beautiful estate located some twenty-odd miles west of Boynton, until such time as they hired another home."

"This proved a big relief to Jim, for he had been concerned with the in-law problem again now that they were once more near the Pattersons. But his relief was short-lived. Brenda spent three days with her family at their home and then joined Jim and his parents at the ancestral estate. The following Sunday, into the yard drove an ancient automobile and out of it tumbled Mr. and Mrs. Patterson and their two sons. Mrs. Wilson, Jim's mother, was an intelligent woman, a gracious hostess. She made Brenda's family welcome, served them refreshments. The Pattersons were greatly taken with the lovely old estate. They would come out often."

"And they did. They came and stayed whole days at a time. The climax came when Jim's brother, Frank, and wife invited him and Brenda up to their camp in Maine for a week's visit. Scarcely had they been there two days before the Pattersons arrived. And here, as at the ancestral home, they adapted themselves with the same familiar ease, misinterpreted Frank's and his wife's polite greeting and acted for all the world as though they were bestowing a great favor."

"Jim knew that something must be done, and he decided that the best and kindest thing to do was to explain things as delicately and plainly as he could to Mr. and Mrs. Patterson. He attempted to do this the next week when Brenda and he were visiting the Patterson home. Just before they departed, Mrs. Patterson said: 'We'll drive out next Sunday and spend the day with you and your folks, Jim.'"

"Jim cleared his throat. 'If you don't mind,' he said, 'I'd rather you waited until we took an apartment in town. You see, after all, that place isn't ours and I don't feel at liberty to entertain you there.'"

"'Pshaw!' said Mrs. Patterson magnanimously. 'We're not guests. You don't have to entertain us none. We'll just sit around.'"

"Jim coughed. 'You seem to have given a different meaning to my use of the word "entertain." I mean after all—'

"But Mrs. Patterson broke in on him with her raucous laughter. 'Now, don't go apologizin'. It's perfectly all right. When we get there don't you pay no attention to us at all. We can keep ourselves entertained.'"

"Jim looked at Brenda in hopeless dismay. And Brenda looked at Jim. "For the first time she seemed to grasp the significance of it all. She glanced toward her mother, but Mrs. Patterson was beaming—innocently, patronizingly. Brenda opened her mouth, and closed it again. And Jim suddenly caught her by the arm and led her from the house and away. He was poignantly conscious of a feeling of frustration. He had been confronted by a problem with which, he realized, there was no hope of trying to cope. Ignorance. And, dimly, he knew there was nothing he could do about it."

GROUND GRIP TIRES

SAVE time and money and get greater efficiency by equipping the rear of your car and truck with a pair of Firestone Ground Grip Tires. They will give you the super-traction needed to pull through mud and unimproved roads and will save you the time, trouble and money of applying chains.

Harvey S. Firestone was born and raised on a farm in Columbiana County, Ohio, which he has operated ever since 1904. It was here on this farm that Mr. Firestone conceived the idea and worked with his tire engineers in developing a practical tire for farm use. Mr. Firestone's experience in farming gave him the realization of the need for a pneumatic tire with lugs of rubber that would increase the drawbar pull, roll easier, save time, and speed up farm operations on cars, trucks, tractors and all wheeled farm implements.

Firestone engineers are continually working with Mr. Firestone on his farm to secure greater farm efficiency. They developed the Ground Grip Tire which is so designed that in soft mud roads it cleans itself and the bars of rubber are so placed that they will not bump on paved roads. The design of this tire is so unusual and its performance so amazing that a patent has been granted by the United States Patent Office covering its exclusive features. The secret of the extra traction of Firestone Ground Grip Tires is the scientifically designed rubber lug of the tread. Under this extraordinary super-traction tread are placed two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords. This is a patented Firestone construction feature which makes it possible to weld this heavy tread to the Gum-Dipped cord body, making it one inseparable unit.

Go to your nearest Firestone Tire Dealer or Implement Dealer or Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store today and ask to see these money-saving tires. And when you order a new tractor or implement, specify Firestone Ground Grip Tires.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiling Anderson have moved from their farm into the dwelling of Mrs. Anna Hirsch.

The Saturday award was well attended Saturday night. There were no claimants for two of the prizes. G. Dini, Walter Mancke and several other Tinley Park fishermen returned from a Wisconsin fishing trip last Friday. Fishing was good until the weather started turning cold.

REPORT OF FLOWER GUILD CHAIRMAN OF TINLEY PARK

Our last opportunity to share flowers with the sick and unfortunate thru the Chicago Fruit and Flower Guild came on Sept. 23rd. We will not send anything now until Christmas time. We hope everyone will start assembling useful articles for this collection.

Those who donated jelly on Sept. 23rd were: Mesdames, F. Baldwin, Wm. Funk, R. J. Hug, J. M. Klepper, F. Goebel, Geo. Hartman, Wm. Marquardt, J. Werth, H. F. Brueggeman, H. Duff, L. Rogers, B. Fulton and A. C. Koehler.

Potted plants and flowers were donated by: Mesdames, L. Rogers, B. Fulton, H. Duff, J. M. Klepper, Geo. Rowden, F. Baldwin, H. Beechstein, Geo. Hartman and Wm. Marquardt. Donation of empty glass jars to be used for bedside bouquets were given by: Mesdames; J. Swisher, J. Boeyer, F. Baldwin, J. Klepper and C. Nielsen.

The season officially opened on May 15 with Lilac Day. Each Wednesday from this time on the Tinley Park Garden Club gathered flowers, fruit, potted plants and jelly for the Chicago Fruit and Flower Guild who in turn, distributed these to the hospitals, institutions and homes. Every one who is sick and shut-in, was made happy.

During the summer the following was sent: 25 boxes flowers, one large box rhubarb, two crates fruit, 34 potted plants, three boxes containers and 23 jars of jelly.

The Garden Club takes this opportunity to thank every person who so generously donated flowers and jellies this season. Special thanks is due Mr. Kososki and Mr. Mager who so willingly cared for these flowers at the Rock Island depot.

If the name of someone who contributed was not mentioned, please know that it was not intentional and your donation went on with the rest just the same.

Mrs. A. Koehler, Flower Guild Chairman.

ORLAND

ORLAND PARK SCHOOL NEWS.

Every week seems to bring forth something new for our school. This week it was a handsome electric clock which we found on the high school room wall. In financing the annual banquet held last year it was decided to put aside a small sum to purchase something for the school. The money was used to buy the new school clock.

"Clean Up Day" had to be postponed until Thursday last week on account of rainy weather. Under the supervision of the teachers, the students worked with much vim to clean the school yard of all debris. As a result, there is a decided improvement upon the play grounds. We wish to thank the Davidson's very much for hauling away the large amount of rubbish which was accumulated.

A meeting of students interested in having a Science Club was held Monday. The following students were elected officers:

President, Sherman Knox, Vice-President, Richard Miller, Secretary Bernice Rust.

The purpose of the club is to stimulate an interest in the world of science and to develop interesting scientific pursuits as life vocations among the high school students. The first life project will probably be a field trip upon which plant and animal life will be observed. Another project which has been planned is the determination of our own latitude by observation on Polaris.

Unit 1 in Literature 1 and 2 classes has been finished. The unit consisted of a series of short stories. The students have been keeping note books with the following outline for each story they read: Title, Author Setting, Characters, Plot under which are sub heads of: Introduction, Ascending action, Climax, Descending Action and Conclusion.

Themes and review for the coming six weeks tests are in order now.

News From Upper Grades

Monday, October 5, was a big day of unusual interest for all the pupils in the Upper Grade Room, for that was the day chosen to visit the Field Museum of Natural History in Chicago.

Promptly at 8:30 we assembled in our classroom, and from there marched to the bus, waiting in front of the school building.

Upon arrival at the Museum, Miss Whipple, a guide for the museum, met us and directed our tour through the "Early Beginnings, Dinosaurs, Neanderthal Man and Early Cave Man." Exhibits that seemed to excite greatest interest were the skeletons of the dinosaurs and the various caves of early man. Miss Whipple then led our group to the Hall of Egyptian Archeology. Early coffins and mummies created by far the greatest interest and fascination. She told us why the Egyptians were anxious to preserve their bodies and why we now have so many interesting remains. We saw many examples of pottery and metal ware and finally got to see the great boat of Lebanon cedar which is about 5000 years old.

When we were led upstairs and were told we might rest upon those inviting benches surrounding the elephants, we were glad, for we were already getting tired. Here Miss Whipple had to leave us, for she had given such clear explanations of all we were seeing, and answered our many questions in her pleasant smiling manner.

From then on, Miss Van Camp was our guide, and led us to Akeley Memorial Hall, which we had been so anxiously waiting to visit. "The African Water Hole" was, of course, the chief attraction here. This is the largest habitat group displayed in any museum. Other points of interest, especially visited in this hall were the exhibits of Asiatic Mountain sheep, collected by Theodore Roosevelt Jr., and Kermit Roosevelt, the American Bison and the small Dik-dik. Special attention was paid to the famous painted back grounds by Charles Corwin.

And then time out for lunch! Food never tasted better and some of our crowd never ate more of it.

After lunch, with pep restored, we followed Miss Van Camp up the winding stair to the second floor where we saw a rubber tree, the cacao tree, a coffee tree and a tea plant. There were interesting replicas of a coffee and a tea plantation.

We then visited the exhibits showing Chinese costumes and masks and Chinese art. Some of the boys wished they might go back there for their Halloween masks. Our march then led downstairs, where we were given permission to roam about and see the great exhibits depicting the life and habits of the American Indian.

Again we gathered around the famous elephants. Here we said farewell to the museum for this trip and marched across to the Aquarium, where we saw some of the most interesting fish life on earth. The Amazon Manatee and the large turtles seemed to attract the greatest attention.

From the Aquarium we boarded our bus and soon were homeward bound. We had a big day, had seen a lot, and had had so much fun. We arrived in front of the school about four o'clock after a fine ride home. We had especially enjoyed our singing and cheers.

Now we are asking, "When will we go on the next trip?" Although we know the students in other rooms will envy us, we know there will be a next time.

Mrs. George Gee and Mrs. B. Jennings accompanied us on the bus and on all our tours. Mrs. Edward Gee joined us later at the museum and was with us all day, too. We very deeply appreciated their company and we hope they enjoyed ours, and trust they will join us the next time.

Pupils who made the trip are: Mildred Doctor, Ione Mullen, Eleanor Knox, Betty Yunker, Dorothy Arnold, Eleanor Cooper, Jean Doyle, Ruth Gee, Virginia Gee, Muriet Morlock Marian Peters, Buddy Cox, Franklin Kruspe, Martin Yunker, Paul Doyle, Nick Heim, John Kesser Jr. Chas. Maddox, Eugene Uthe, David Jennings, Owen Jungles and William Maddox.

This year the students of the Upper grades have had the advantage of using a new globe. This has added greatly to the interest in Geography. Junior Kesser missed school last Friday in order to attend the Cities Series. Like all Cub fans, he agrees the game was not quite so interesting as it might have been.

On Friday afternoon October 2, the Achievement Club held their annual election of officers. Much excitement and campaigning preceded the casting of votes. The following were elected: President, Buddy Cox; Vice president, Eleanor Knox; Secretary, Eugene Uthe and Treasurer, Ione Mullen.

The Mamma and Papa Seal. I liked the mamman and papa seal the best. I like to see them play tag. The papa seal would always come up in the front left corner. The mamman seal would go under the stone platform and come up in the middle of the pool. They swim on their backs mostly all the time.

Joyce Homerding 5th Grade

I like the Indian villages because they were interesting. The beaded bags and head bands were pretty. I liked one game especially good. Its like our button game. They use little chips around under a mat and hold them in her hand. If the other one does not answer right, she does it over.

Joyce Town 5th Grade

I liked the seals best at the Aquarium. There are two seals there. One is the mother and the other is the father. The mother is a light color. The father is a darker color. They play tag together. They both swim on their backs. The father's stomach is as light colored as the mother's back. Then you can't tell them apart. It is very much fun to watch them play tag.

Gerald Cannon 4th Grade

I liked the skeleton of the whale.

Dorothy Yates 5th Grade

I enjoyed the Cave Man best because he lived differently than we do. He lived in a cave where he drew pictures of animals. The early people had very short necks.

Robert Hewson 5th Grade

The Anaconda snake was very interesting. This snake was coiled up ready to spring and held two eggs in the coils. It was about ten feet long.

Eugene Yunker 5th Grade

The best part of the trip was the Cave Man exhibit. I liked them best because they were only skins around their waists. They lived in caves instead of houses like ours.

Francis Lucas 5th Grade

The most interesting thing at the Field Museum was the big boat the king was carried in to be buried. It is the biggest row boat I've seen. The oars were as large around as a small tree.

The Inquiring Reporter

Place: Intermediate Room.

Question: "What part of your trip to the Field Museum and Shedd Aquarium did you enjoy most?"

Robert Doyle, 4th grade: The most interesting part was the Indian Village. I liked it because it was the first time I ever saw an Indian Village that was so beautifully made.

Jeanne Balou, 4th grade: I liked the penquins the best because they looked so much like little men. They walked so funny. One stuck his head at me.

Robert Estand, 5th grade: I think the mummy was interesting because I had never seen a real one before. Some of the mummies were wrapped this way about 5000 years ago. The one that was unwrapped had shriveled up to the size of a small child. Shirley Cleveland, 4th grade: I liked the stuffed animals best.

Mrs. Fred Kopelman

Wednesday evening, a group of relatives and friends surprised Mr. and Mrs. Edward Beaver in honor of their fifth wedding anniversary. The guests brought with them an abundant supper, which was greatly enjoyed. Mr. and Mrs. Beaver were also the recipients of many pretty and useful gifts. The guest list included Mr. and Mrs. Joe Kotz and family of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Newcomb of Orland, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Phillips of Orland and Wm. Frank, John and Miss Margaret Hostert also of Orland township.

The pupils of the Goodings Grove school and their teacher, Miss Evelyn Kopelman will sponsor a card and bunco party at the Goodings Grove Hall on Wednesday night, October 14. Dancing will follow the games, with Jingles orchestra furnishing the music. Picnic supper will also be served.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Reiter entertained a group of friends in their home Saturday night. Cards and refreshments were enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jensen and daughter Charlene have returned from a visit with the former's parents in DeKalb.

A special meeting of the teachers in this locality was held at the Ludwig school in Lockport Wednesday afternoon at which the teachers discussed their problems and the new text books. Miss Delaney, assistant superintendent of schools was present.

Nurses from the County Superintendent's office and Mr. Booth have been visiting the schools the past week. Mr. Hindle, music director has also called at most of the schools.

Mrs. Martin Jungles who was seriously hurt last week in an auto accident is much improved and hopes to be taken home within a few days. Mrs. Jungles has her right leg and left hand in casts, but had the stitches removed from the gash on her head Saturday morning.

Mrs. H. R. Jay was hostess to the Homer Wayside Workers Circle Thursday afternoon at her home in Lockport. Mrs. Fred Paddock, president of the Circle, Miss Myra Reed and Mrs. Buelah Reed contemplate attending the State Convention for Kings Daughters at Peking, Tuesday and Wednesday.

A large crowd attended the Republican rally which was held at the Homer Town Hall Thursday night. Hayes Kennedy and Attorney Robert Martin of Joliet were the speakers. Several other candidates were present. A very good program of entertainment was also provided. At the close of the rally doughnuts and coffee were served.

Wallace Morrison is a medical patient in the Illinois Research hospital in Chicago.

Miss Lois Jungles who has been ill is much improved.

Emil Sinandl of Chicago was a guest last week at the Walter Konow home.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Bump visited with relatives in Chicago Sunday.

Mary Catherine Marti is absent due to a cold.

The eighth grade drew some maps of the United States and put in the corn and wheat belts.

High School Room
The school had a fire drill Monday which took 29 seconds.

Miss Leak was ill over the week end with the flu.

The high school room visited the News-Bulletin office Monday. The Sophomores the first period and the Freshmen the second period. They both saw many interesting things. When they came back they wrote an essay about the trip. The following written by Fern Clevenger, was judged the best:

Newspapers In The Making.
The type is molded in the Linotype machine. This is done somewhat as a typewriter. There is hot lead with which the molds single lines are made. Then this is set, meaning the metal as arranged in columns so as to read in the correct way. This is put in a steel frame and wedged in places, then locked so the type can not fall out. Then it is placed in the printing press. A cylinder formed ink roller carrying ink is rolled on the type, leaving a thin film of ink, then paper is fed to the machine. This type is transferred to the paper.

FEATURES
You Should Know That—This is Mr. Dunn's third year at Mokena. Before coming to Mokena he taught at Charleston for five years and at Newton for two years. He received his master degree at the University of Illinois in 1935.

Mr. Dunn was born in Kentucky and reared in Illinois. He likes basketball better than any other sport although he played golf and tennis this summer. His hobby is collecting antiques. Franchot Tone and Norma Shearer are his favorite screen stars and Lum and Abner are his choice in radio programs. He has lived in four states.

The first six grades were dismissed Monday at 2:15 so Miss Doig and Mrs. Ferguson could attend an important meeting called by Mr. Booth.

Administrative Comment
Program of Physical Education to meet the requirements of the state is being carried out in the school. Games and exercise to develop the muscles of the body are being conducted out side when the weather permits and in the gym if the weather is bad.

Intermediate Room
The Intermediate room is very attractive for the month of October with Halloween decorations on the board. The back board has sunflowers that the fourth grade has made and zenies in the bowls that the fifth grade has made.

Hyacinth Rinke came home from the hospital Tuesday.

FARMERS OPPOSE LANDON'S

FARM CORN-LOAN PLAN

Will County Democratic Headquarters issue the following:

According to John H. Warne of Winfield Township, well known DuPage Farm Leader, the Farmers are not taking very kindly to the plan of Governor Landon to abandon the present Federal Farm Corn-Loan system and substitute a Federal Ware-House certificate scheme such as was in effect in Iowa from 1923 to 1932, as indicated in his Des Moines, Iowa, speech of September 22, 1936.

Mr. Warne is quoted as follows: "Under the present Federal Corn-Loan Plan, farmers have been able to seal their corn on their own farms in their own cribs and obtain loans up to forty-five cents per bushel at a four percent per annum interest rate. Under the Iowa plan of Ware-House certificates, a farmer was required to take his corn to a licensed ware-house, pay storage, and in return for it he could borrow as much as six cents per bushel on which he had to pay interest at the rate of 8 per cent per annum. During the nine years this plan was in operation in Iowa the total loans for the state of Iowa never exceeded one-half million dollars per year, whereas during the year of 1933 alone, Iowa farmers obtained 60 million dollars in loans on the basis of 45 cents per bushel and at the rate of four percent per annum interest, under the present Federal Corn-Loan plan, every cent of which together with interest in full has been fully repaid to the Federal Government.

"Governor Landon's plan to make a National Program on this basis can mean nothing but ruin to the farmers."

"Oh! Susanna"

The following poem was composed by Mr. John P. Conrad of Peotone and is sung to the tune of, "Oh! Susanna."

You come from Kansas U. S. A.,
A sun flower on your breast
And on your way to Washington,
To check up what's yet left,
To clean up the Kitchen Cabinet
You'll do your level best
Take your orders from Uncle Sam
And work to do the rest.

Chorus: Oh! Al. Landon, yes we're glad you run,
With Knox and Brooks close by your side,
The race is truly won.

This fight reminds us of, the Grant
And the Greeley campaign
When Grant rode on a big white horse

And Greeley on a mule.
Now Landon's on the right old horse
And Franklin is the tool—
Jim Farley's job is sweet as honey
Who grabs all the money.

Sun flower of the middle west
You bet you are the best.
How can you raise corn on Wall Street,

Enough to feed the rest?
Lincoln, Grant and Logan came
From the middle west
They were full-fledged Republicans
With true American test.

Together with loyal Republicans
Landon has them on the run.
With the help of the brainy Democrats,

This election will surely be won.
My neighbors house was on fire
I did not ask his view—
Many pails of water I then threw
So the flames would go no higher.

If I hadn't helped my neighbor,
My own home would also went.
It was done with little labor
Or I would have been out my rent.
Now Lincoln, Grant, and Jeffersons,
WE'RE ALL AMERICANS
We'll revive the Constitution, right,
If Landon wins this fight.

Do the Rich Share the Burden?

Mr. Roosevelt in his 1932 campaign and since his inauguration as president has devoted much time and many words to an indictment of the inequality of the distribution of wealth in this country. He decried the concentration of wealth in the hands of a few and embarked upon a program which the people were told would tend to correct this evil, primarily by taxing great wealth out of existence. The President wrote in his booklet "Looking Forward" published in 1934, (quoting from pages 104 and 105) "Not only must the government income meet prospective expenditures, but this income must be secured on the principal of ability to pay. THIS IS A DECLARATION IN FAVOR OF GRADUATED INCOME, INHERITANCE AND PROFITS TAXES, AND AGAINST TAXES ON FOOD AND CLOTHING, WHOSE BURDEN IS ACTUALLY SHIFTED TO THE CONSUMERS OF THESE NECESSITIES OF LIFE ON A PER CAPITA BASIS RATHER THAN ON THE BASIS OF THE RELATIVE SIZE OF PERSONAL INCOME."

To that great mass of the American people who have but scant share of the nation's wealth these words and similar utterances by the president gave promise of a new era of increased opportunity and fuller, richer life. Many Americans are still being misled by such statements from Washington, D. C.

Let us look then to the undisputed statistics as compiled by the Treasury Department. In 1930 THE WELL-TO-DO AND THE RICH CONTRIBUTED 68.2 PER CENT OF THE NATIONAL GOVERNMENT'S TOTAL INTERNAL REVENUE AND CUSTOMS RECEIPTS, WHILE MISCELLANEOUS TAXES AND CUSTOM RECEIPTS, BEARING MOST HEAVILY UPON THE CONSUMER, CONTRIBUTED ONLY 31.8 PER CENT OF SUCH RECEIPTS. CONTRAST THESE FIGURES WITH THOSE FOR 1935 WHEN TAXES BASED UPON ABILITY TO PAY CONTRIBUTED ONLY 38.7 PER CENT OF THE INTERNAL REVENUE AND CUSTOMS RECEIPTS WHILE TAXES BASED UPON CONSUMPTION CONTRIBUTED 61.3 PER CENT. PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, himself has defined consumers' taxes as "the invisible taxes paid by people in every walk of life, (and which) fall relatively much more heavily upon the poor man than on the rich man."

The American voter should be informed as to these facts in order that he may not again be misled in this campaign of 1936. From Will County Republican Headquarters.

Unemployment on Farms
Why has Washington refused to make an unemployment census? Because the greatest unemployment exists on the farms, and the gentleman farmer in the White House and his Brain Trust were deliberately throwing men out of work by their agricultural policies.

Don't Be Fooled

HEAT YOUR HOME THIS WINTER WITH REAL AIR CONDITIONED HEAT

Air conditioning is the modern way to heat and cool your home, office or store, but don't be fooled by the concerns that advertise air conditioning when in reality all they do is circulate the air with a fan.

Here are the essentials of modern air conditioning:

1. Humidifier—A drip or spray humidifier automatically controls the moisture content of the air. Properly moistened air is several degrees more effective than heated dry air.
2. Filters—One of the most important features of air conditioning. All of the dirt, dust, lint, pollen and bacteria are removed from the air as it is drawn from the rooms and only clean moist air is returned.
3. Heating Unit. Direct heating by actual contact of the air you want heated with the unit containing the heat eliminates the heat loss encountered by other methods such as radiators. It saves you coal.
4. Circulation. A squirrel cage type slow speed suction fan circulates the air which is drawn from the rooms in winter. In summer the cool air of the basement or in the evening the cool air near the ground is drawn in and circulated throughout the house. A refrigerating coil and de-humidifier may also be used for summer cooling.
5. Controls. No heating system is complete without the proper controls to regulate the draft damper and blower. This automatic electrical device regulated by a room thermostat will provide you with even heat.
6. Appearance. Last, but not least is the appearance of the installed unit. The heater should have a galvanized inner casing and a square outer casing with a durable outer finish. The ducts and pipe work should be galvanized and installed in a neat manner.

Air conditioning is the most efficient and healthful heat that you can install. The air is taken from the rooms, filtered, heated to the proper temperature, moistened and returned for your comfort. The SUNBEAM AIR-CONDITIONING UNIT made by a division of the American Radiator Co., incorporates all of the above features and we are prepared to give you a free estimate on a complete job, or rebuilding your present furnace and adding the air conditioning features to it. The installed prices, as a rule, are much less than any other efficient heating system you can install.

GUNLOCK RANCH

SYNOPSIS

Sleepy Cat, desert town of the Southwest, is celebrating the Fourth of July. Jane Van Tassel, beautiful daughter of Gus Van Tassel, hated owner of Gunlock ranch, has arrived from the East for the first time. She watches the Frontier Day celebration in company with Doctor Carpy, crusty, tender-hearted friend of the community. Henry Sawdy of the Circle Dot ranch, tricked in a fake horse race the day before by Dave McCrossen, foreman at Gunlock, plans revenge. He enters Bill Denison, a handsome young Texas wrangler, in the rodeo which McCrossen is favored to win, and lays heavy bets on him. Unknown to the crowd, Denison is a champion horseman. McCrossen and the young stranger in the various events, Denison then drops a cigarette carelessly. Racing down the track full tilt, he picks up the cigarette. The verdict goes to Denison when McCrossen refuses to attempt the stunt. Entreated by the crowd, Denison agrees to perform another trick. Jane Van Tassel is asked for her bracelet and she throws it on the table. Just as Denison rides to pick it up a yell from Barney Rebstock, a McCrossen henchman, scares the pony, nearly costing the rider his life. Gun play is prevented by the intervention of Doctor Carpy. Back on Gunlock ranch, after two years in Chicago, because of her father's illness, Jane gets lost riding in the hills and meets Denison, now a neighbor, who guides her home. Not knowing her identity, he speaks bitterly of Van Tassel. She tells McCrossen who brought her home and he denounces Denison as a cattle thief. Later she asks Doctor Carpy why her father is unpopular and he tells her it is because of Van Tassel's ruthless and unscrupulous character. McCrossen tries to woo Jane, but is sharply rebuffed. Once again she loses her way in the hills and meets Denison. On impulse she gives him her bracelet for guiding her home. Their interest in each other growing, she reveals her identity to him. Jane is distressed to learn from Carpy that her father had wronged Denison. The Texan had worked at Gunlock as foreman and been promised a share in the profits. When he quit, Van Tassel reneged. In reprisal Denison has been running cattle off Gunlock ranch. Shamed and humiliated, Jane avoids Denison, but longs to see him. When at length they meet, he confesses his love.

"How is McCrossen coming on, doctor?" asked Jane.

"He'll be up in a few days now. The infection is disappearing. How are you? You're the one I'm interested in."

"Following orders like a lamb, doctor. Don't you see how brown I'm getting?"

"Yes, outside. But what about inside? That's where I want you to get brown. By the way, your friend Bill Denison was in to see me the other day. He's been up north with the fire fighters—way up on the Crazy Woman at Jim Laramie's ranch. Look here, girl," he continued, "what are you doing tomorrow? We are going to have a moose dinner. Ever eat moose? Come in and try it."

Jane hesitated, "Oh, I don't know—" "Come along. There'll be nobody else there, if that's what you're afraid of?"

Sleepy Cat looked deserted when Jane rode in next day. Jane asked McAlpin at the barn where all the men were.

"Up north, fire fighting."

"Is it as bad as that?"

"I never saw it so bad in the twenty years I've lived here and at Calabasas! They brought in a wagonload yesterday of the worst burnt men I ever seen in my life. The hospital's pretty near full. Doc Carpy was there all night."

Jane was for going home. She walked up to the hotel and talked with Puss, the housekeeper. "Don't you go," counseled Puss. "If the doctor's expecting to see you, he'll be all upset if you don't stay."

"But with all these men in the hospital? I'd rather wait till he has a free day," suggested Jane.

The housekeeper laughed. "If you wait for a free day for the doctor, you'll wait till Judgment day. And he might be busier then than he is now. There's a preacher in town this week, baptizing folks down in the river. 'Ord'ing to what he says, there'll be a lot more Sleepy Cat fire fighters needing help Judgment day than is needin' it now. Come in here and take off your things."

When Jane sat down with the doctor in his private dining room for the moose dinner, he made light of the fire situation as well as of his labors.

"All in the day's work. Puss is an alarmist. She's always telling me I'm working too hard."

Jane repeated the anecdote of the preacher and Puss' application of it to the doctor himself on Judgment day.

Carpy laughed. "That's Panama she's talking about. Puss is powerful afraid of him. . . Who is he? Why, a pretty good fellow—used to be an auctioneer and all-round gambler—got converted—preaches up and down the line from Medicine Bend to Sleepy Cat. But he volunteered for fire fighting. He's one of the men got burnt yesterday, and he's up with the rest of 'em at the hospital."

The ex-sheriff, Bill Pardaloe, rode out to Gunlock two days later and conscripted the men to fight fire coming down the Crazy Woman and threatening Sleepy Cat.

The quiet of that day and the next was like a calm before a storm. After supper Jane ordered her pony saddled and rode clear up to the summit of Gunlock Knob, where she could see the northern country for many miles.

When she reached the top she was sorry she had attempted the climb. The spectacle was awe-inspiring, but terrifying.

Far beyond the hills and all along the northern horizon she saw patches of dull, silent red, slowly rising and falling, at moments increasing, and again subsiding.

She fell asleep early, but after midnight she woke. The sky was fairly clear, and she could hear the wind singing in the pines along the ranch house. She was roused from her thoughts by the approaching clatter of galloping hoofs. Raising herself to support her head on her elbow, she listened. The clatter came nearer, the galloping faster. In a moment she heard a man pull his horse sharply up and spring from the saddle under her window. "Miss Jane!" he called.

"Wake up, please!"

She knew the voice. "I'm awake, Bull. What is it?"

"The boys are ridin' in behind me."

"All of them?"

"Everybody. They'll be here inside twenty minutes."

"What time is it, Bull?"

"From the moon, about two o'clock. The boys'll want somethin' to eat. They're ridin' right out again. I'll call Quong."

"What's the matter, Bull—what are they riding out again for?"

"The fire has crossed the river."

CHAPTER VI

Bill Page, the messenger of alarm, turned in with Quong and Jane to make ready a hasty supper for the hungry, weary men.

McCrossen was in command of the fire fighters and, at the head of the table, looked his part. As he rose from the supper table, his eyes were never brighter as he walked, smoky and covered with the marks of the day's hard fight, but smiling and fresh, over to where Jane was standing.

While Jane asked questions, McCrossen lighted a cigarette. "Not a bit of danger, Jane, to Gunlock—not while I can get out on the fire line, anyway. I've fought these infernal blazes all my life, and I don't figure this one's goin' to beat me. The only thing that worries me, Jane, is to think of your bein' here alone at home while we're fire-fightin'."

"Of course, I can't help some worry now, with the ranch threatened," she returned thoughtfully.

"Jane," he said impressively, "you needn't worry. I like to fight for a girl like you. While I'm able to raise an arm, Jane, I'll be out there thinkin' of you." His hands closed firmly on her shoulders.

She shrugged them and edged uneasily away. "Saddles, boys!" shouted McCrossen in his rich, hearty voice. "Look alive, there, everybody! Come over to where my horse is, Jane. I want you to say good-bye to us! Give the boys a word of cheer."

"Where are you going?" she asked.

"Over the Divide. I want to do some backfin' north of the pastures. Come along, girl," he insisted, taking her arm firmly.

All at once he caught her in a vise-like grip of his arms and kissed her twice before she could escape. She slapped him indignantly and pushed him violently away.

McCrossen laughed. "Slap me again, Jane; that was worth a string of slaps, girl. But why not take a little practice? You'd get to like it, same as I do!"

Toward the night of the second day, the fire crew straggled back to the ranch house, McCrossen at their head. The store of beer prudently laid in from town was rapidly depleted—circumstances seeming to forbid the restrictions that Jane usually imposed.

Next morning, the sun rose hot and in an atmosphere without a breath of wind. Faces were brighter.

But after breakfast, the mail carrier, Ignace, from the Reservation, on his way to town, brought disquieting news. A fire had broken out in the timber along the eastern boundary, and every buck had been called out to fight it.

McCrossen listened carefully. "Which way was the wind, Ignace, when you left?"

"From the east."

"Hell's bells," exclaimed McCrossen, "just where we don't want it." He questioned the carrier closely. The big ranch was now threatened on the southeast, and McCrossen started with the freshest of his men for the new danger point.

In the afternoon Jane rode into town to order some supplies sent out. While she was in Rubido's store, a white man from the Reservation came in. The clerk who waited on him asked him about the fires down his way.

"Not so good," said the man. "A new one broke out this morning between the Reservation timber and Bill Denison's ranch. Bill's in getting men together now."

"One, in another aisle and unobserved, walked quietly outdoors and down the street for McAlpin's livery barn."

"Mose," she said to the hostler on duty, "is Bill Denison in town?"

"He is. His horse, Music, is here—Bill rode in pretty fast, an' I been rubbin' Music down. Bill says—"

"Mose, I want to see Bill. Go up the street and see if you can find him. Tell him I want to see him and I'll be up at the hotel."

Half an hour later Jane, sitting with the door open in Doctor Carpy's office, off the hotel lobby, heard footsteps approaching and, turning, saw Denison. She rose quickly, extended her hand, took his without a greeting, and spoke rapidly and nervously. "I heard you were in town," she said, "and that you were in danger at the ranch—I suppose, for that matter, we all are. But they said you were taking out men, and I wanted to see you, Bill, and ask what we could do to help. You won't take that amiss, I'm sure."

"How could I take anything amiss from you?"

"In a common danger," she said, flushing in some confusion and interrupting him to hide it, "we ought to help one another in the hills. What is there I can do? What is the situation, Bill?"

"Well, I suppose I might say, it's like the situation of a man with a loaded pistol pointed at his head," he answered. "I'm all right as long as the gun doesn't go off. The wind's got its finger on the trigger, and you know how these hill winds are—blamed uncertain when they get going—"

"But what can we do at the ranch to help make you safe? Is there anything, Bill? Anything to help?"

Both were conscious of slight strain. Denison shuffled awkwardly. "Why, Miss Jane—"

"Since when Miss Jane?" she asked with asperity. "I didn't know—" he began.

"Neither did I know, Bill. Now answer my question. If you're in danger, tell me what I can do."

"Have the boys keep a close eye on the two Reservation fires. If either of 'em get around Gunlock Knob, it'll be kind of bad for both ranches."

"Yes, but, Bill, how am I to know when or whether they do get around the Knob? How am I going to know whether you yourself need help?" She was beginning to realize that it was impossible to get anything but evasive generalities out of him. "Tell me this: If you need help from us, will you send me word? Right away?"

He thought for a moment. "I'll send word over to you at the ranch house, Jane."

She could not escape the significance of his tone in uttering her name. But she kept her balance and spoke steadily:

"Keep your promise, Bill; I shall be waiting for the word when it comes."

Along the hill trail as Jane rode home the air was heavy with smoke drifting slowly up from the south. It was laden with the pungent smell of brush fire and acrid with the creosote of burned slashings from cut-over lands on the Reservation.

Reaching home, she was not surprised to find everything there abnormally quiet. McCrossen, with most of the men, was up in the hills. The sole exception to the general atmospheric gloom was Quong. Nothing had yet daunted the busy China boy.

When Jane dressed at daybreak and looked out, the wind had shifted and was blowing fresh from the south.

McCrossen and his men were up betimes. He reported to Jane that they had checked the fire up toward the pass. He was in good spirits. Jane went to her breakfast feeling reassured. She was finishing her coffee when Quong stuck his head through the kitchen door into the dining room and said: "Man to see!"

Jane walked to the front door and found a man on horseback.

"What can I do for you?"

"I've just come from Bill Denison's. He says if you can spare a dozen men quick, he can, maybe, save his ranch buildings."

"Tell him I'll do everything I can to get them over right away. What's your name?"

"Scott, ma'am."

Jane ran over to the corral, where McCrossen was closing the wire gate. "Bill Denison has sent a messenger over—"

"I saw him," interjected McCrossen curtly.

"—asking for help," Jane went on rapidly. "If we can get a dozen men over to him quick, he can save his ranch buildings—"

"A lot of gall, ain't it, Bill Denison lookin' to Gunlock for help?"

"No matter what differences there have been," insisted Jane firmly, "in the hills we're all going to stand together in a time like this. Get the men together, Dave, and get over quick and do what you can."

McCrossen, drawing from his pocket a plug of tobacco, bit off a chuck. "I don't approve of that."

"It's not a question of your approving, Dave, I want you to go. Right off; now!"

McCrossen was in no hurry. "Who's goin' to look after Gunlock if I go over to Bill Denison's?" he asked, regarding Jane sullenly.

Jane was nobody's fool on the danger of the situation.

"Dave," she exclaimed, impatiently, "you know the worst threat to us, with this wind, is from the south. If the Denison ranch burns we're in danger ourselves. Will you saddle up quick and get over there with the boys?" she demanded.

McCrossen made no move to go. "I'll tell you right now I've had a damned sight more experience in these forest fires than you have. And I say my place's right here!" He spoke loudly and angrily.

Jane grew white. "I want you to know I'm boss of this ranch. My father has told you so—and this order is going to be obeyed or I'll know why."

McCrossen faced her with as much animosity as he dared show. "Well, if you want to know one reason why your order won't be obeyed, just look at me—I'm a reason. I know where my place is when Gunlock's in danger," he thundered.

"Stop your talk!" exclaimed Jane. "Will you do as I tell you or not?"

"I will not."

"Then you're discharged as foreman of this ranch. Take your things and get off it by tomorrow morning."

"Like hell I will."

Lesson for October 11

BECOMING A CHRISTIAN

LESSON TEXT—Acts 16:22-34, Philippians 3:7-16.

GOLDEN TEXT—Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved.—Acts 16:31.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Two Happy Prisoners.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Heroes in Prison.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How May I Become a Christian.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How to Become a Christian.

The conversion of Lydia and her gracious growth into usefulness as a Christian is in striking contrast with the experience that Paul had with the demon-possessed damsel (Acts 16:16-18). A satanic power of divination had made her profitable to unscrupulous men. Such men have not perished from the earth, and there are still those who make merchandise of silly and sinful women.

Paul commands the demon to come out of her and at once the issue is drawn.

I. Christianity versus Crooked Business (Acts 16:22-24).

As long as the missionaries were at the place of prayer and in the home of Lydia they were not disturbed. But as soon as they touched the illegitimate gain of these "business" men who were making money from the misfortune of the poor damsel, bitter opposition arose.

Cunningly combining the plea of false patriotism and anti-Semitism with the ever-potent argument that business was being hindered, they raised a hue and cry which resulted in the beating and imprisonment of Paul and Silas (Acts 16:14-21).

We live in another century, but men are the same. Let the church and its members only go through the motions of formal service and present a powerless religious philosophy, and the world will applaud and possibly support its activities. But let the pungent power of the gospel go out through its life and ministry, and deliver devil-possessed men and women, let its God-given grace expose the hypocrisy and wickedness of men and there will soon be opposition.

II. Down, but not defeated (vv. 25, 26).

The preachers landed in jail, beaten, bloody, and chained to the stocks. What a disgrace it would have been if they had come there because of their misdeeds. How ashamed we are when professed Christian leaders sin and fall into the hands of the law.

But "Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness sake" (Matt. 5:10). Little wonder that they forgot their bruises and their chains and began to sing and pray, even at midnight.

Note that "the prisoners were listening to them." The words we speak, the songs we sing, our every action, speak either for God or against Him. "Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."

As they pray God speaks, chains fall away, prison doors open. Men can lock doors; God shakes them open.

The jailer, cruel and bold when he put them into prison, but now in fear, is about to kill himself. But God has better thoughts concerning him. Paul cries out, "Do thyself no harm" and he experiences

III. Salvation Instead of Suicide (vv. 27-34).

Thank God for the earthquakes in our lives which bring us to him.

The jailer, being rightly exercised by God's dealings with him, asks the greatest and most important question that can ever come out of the heart of unregenerate man—"What must I do to be saved?" Reader, have you asked this question? Then you, too, are ready for the answer, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved."

The closing verses of our lesson present the personal testimony of Paul that he had surrendered.

IV. All for Christ (Phil. 3:7-14).

All was but loss to him compared with what he gained in Christ. We speak of surrendering all for Christ, but as a matter of fact we lose only what is of no real value and make infinite gain.

Paul, as are all great followers of Jesus Christ, was a "one thing" man. All that he had or was or hoped to be, every ounce of energy and love, went into his pressing "toward the goal unto the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

Independence of Opinions

It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solitude to live after our own; but the great man is he who in the midst of the crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Overcoming Desires

I count him braver who overcomes his desires than him who conquers his enemies; for the hardest victory is the victory over self.—Aristotle.

THE DEMOCRATIC DONKEY

ALTHOUGH Thomas Nast is usually credited with being the man who made the donkey one of the emblems of the Democratic party, the fact is that some other cartoonist, whose name is unknown, used the same symbol fully three decades before the famous Harper's Weekly artist did.

When Andrew Jackson retired from the presidency in 1837 he dumped in the lap of his successor, Martin Van Buren, a flood of "wild-cat currency" and wild speculation caused by his destruction of the United States bank and the distribution of the treasury surplus in private banks. So a cartoonist of that period drew a picture entitled "The Modern Balaam and His Ass" which showed Jackson mounted on a donkey, across whose withers hung a bag labeled "Specie Currency—Circulating Medium." A ghost, labeled "Bankrupts of 1836," was causing the donkey to balk and its rider was elaborating it with a cane labeled "Veto." Behind the rider and his mount walked Van Buren saying "I shall tread in the footsteps of my illustrious predecessor."

From that time on, during the disputes over the money question, the donkey frequently appeared in the cartoons and became the accepted symbol of the Democratic party. But it was the genius of Thomas Nast which made this symbol familiar to millions of Americans.

During the feud between President Andrew Johnson and Edwin M. Stanton, secretary of war, Nast was a strong ally of the latter. When Stanton died soon after President Grant had made him a justice of the Supreme Court, the southern Democratic papers, continuing the feud, attacked Stanton even in their obituary notices of him.

On January 15, 1870 Nast drew his first donkey cartoon. It pictured Stanton as a dead lion being kicked by a donkey labeled "Copperhead press." Underneath it were the lines: "A Live Jackass kicking a dead Lion and such a Lion! and such a Jackass." In later cartoons he also depicted the Democratic papers, especially James Gordon Bennett's New York Herald, as a donkey and after a while began applying the symbol to the Democratic party as well as its press.

HEADGEAR

"IF YOU lose your standards, rally to my white plume!" cried Henry of Navarre before the Battle of Ivry and so the helmet of Navarre with its snowy decoration became the sign and symbol of a cause which won and made him king of France.

In American politics, too, voters have rallied behind candidates whose headgear or some other bit of apparel have been characteristic of the man. In the days of Andrew Jackson, loyal Democrats brandished hickory canes in imitation of the one which "Old Hickory" carried. In 1840 the Whigs clapped coonskin caps on their heads and went out to sing and cheer "Old Tippecanoe," the Indiana frontiersman, into the White House.

On the streets of New York the white beaver hat worn by Horace Greeley, editor of the Tribune, was a familiar sight. But perhaps even in those days the "peepul" were suspicious of a "high hat" candidate, so Greeley's supporters, wearing "white plugs," failed to elect him. Ulysses S. Grant once worked in a tannery, therefore parades in his honor were marked by men wearing shaggy and obviously untanned fur coats and bearing signs which declared "Bring on the enemy and we'll tan his hide."

In the Cleveland campaign of 1888 his running mate was Senator Thurman, the last member of the upper house to use snuff. After doing so he would sweep a red bandanna handkerchief out of his pocket with a grand gesture. So Democrats that year had whole suits made of bandannas and women wore bandanna dresses.

Another vice-presidential candidate who furnished a striking headgear symbol for his party was Theodore Roosevelt. Thousands wore Rough Rider hats in the campaign of 1900 and it was still a potent emblem in 1904 when T. R. was candidate for President.

But another quarter of a century was to elapse before a bit of headgear would be a feature of the campaign. In 1928 Alfred E. Smith made the brown derby famous from one end of the land to the other but it became a symbol of defeat instead of victory.

Terminal of Gota Canal

Gothenburg is one of the terminals of the Gota canal, which winds over 240 miles through the heart of Sweden, sometimes following lakes, sometimes rivers, sometimes a canal so narrow that trees at the sides of the banks brush the small steamers on the water. All in all 56 miles of canal supplement the natural waterway. These various links were completed more than 300 years after the project was first conceived and undertaken.

Passenger Pigeon

Every species or subdivision of a species of domestic pigeon to be found in our country today had its origin in some European or Asiatic country, according to an authority in the Rural New-Yorker. North America, did, however, have a truly representative American pigeon, the Passenger pigeon, a wild pigeon whose natural habitat was the entire continent. This particular American bird would be with us today, had it not been for the unmerciful slaughter of it by those whose only thought was the making of "easy money," which brought about its extinction.

1000 PEOPLE ATTEND GOP RALLY AT MONEE

More than 1,000 men, women and children in the vicinity of Monee attended the G. O. P. rally staged Sunday at the fair grounds and the event also attracted spectators from Peotone, Dixmore, Kankakee and Joliet.

Political speeches were interspersed with entertainment and refreshments, candy, ice cream, popcorn and a baseball game added to the success. Loud speakers carried the voices of the political orators to the crowd.

Christ Hall, Monee committee-man, opened the meeting, later turning it over to James E. Bell who acted as chairman. The principal speaker was State Senator William E. Jenner of Indiana, youthful orator who is the minority leader in the upper house of his state.

He dwelt on the issue of the Constitution and said it was the first time that the party in power ever had to defend its attitude toward that document. He claimed further that the imports and trade agreements made by the Democratic administration were directly damaging the income of Will county farmers and that the enormous debt is forcing the United States to increase taxes, "and at that," he added, "the income is still not as great as the expenditures."

Mrs. Mildred Ilgen, precinct committeewoman from Monee, welcomed those present after an introduction by Mr. Bell.

Candidates present who spoke included Dr. E. A. Kingston, Paul V. Wunder, Lottie Holman O'Neil, Warren L. Wood, Thomas K. Sprague, and W. W. Smith, James E. Burke and Robert Higgins, who spoke for Congressman Reed.

"Vast distinction between prosecution and persecution is important in the office of State's attorney," Burke told his audience. "It is the duty of the state's attorney to protect the innocent as well as to punish the guilty."

"If I am elected I will assume the office fully conscious of that dual responsibility," he concluded.

Representative Wood, speaking for his father, Harvey Wood, former mayor of Joliet who was unable to speak because of a throat ailment outlined the farm situation in Will county, and declared that President Roosevelt had already ordered that insurance company loans to farmers be limited to $25 an acre.

Charges Inequality

"According to the insurance records of the state of Illinois," he added, "92 per cent of the land already has an average loan of $48 per acre."

"When these loans come due, what will happen?" he asked his audience, as he charged that the land will have to be foreclosed upon.

Wood added that the national administration had ordered Illinois to increase the sales tax to 3 per cent to bring a revenue of three million dollars a month. He claimed that the three million provided half of the relief bill for Illinois, whereas many of the southern states were paying only 4 per cent of their total relief bill.

The Best In Tinley Park

Some folks have travelled o'er the globe
And many a sight they've seen.
Some have dined 'most everywhere
And sharpened up their tasters' e'en.
But 'pon my word, right here at home
Now did you ever try
Your taster on a "hunk" of Mother Clemens' apple pie?

You may have eaten pies galore,
The kind that mother bakes
You may have sampled tasty bits,
And fancy wedding cakes,
But there's no delicacy on earth so good
That is can ever vie,
With a generous, juicy cut, of
Clemens' apple pie.

Those sugared, tasty, apples, baked to a golden brown
Such flavor and orama, none can compare in town.
A flaky crust, melts in your mouth,
A taste that lingers long
You're contented, smug, self-satisfied
When the last crumb is gone.

Mere words cannot describe
Nor wealth, it n'ere can buy,
That famed technique that Clemens has
Of baking apple pie.

Now when my earthly days are o'er
And I know that I must die
My epitaph perhaps will read,
"Here lies a guy
Who left this earth for a place
"On High"
No treasured gold he wished to hold
Riches was not his eye,
But in each hand he held
A generous, juicy cut, of Clemens' Apple Pie!

How Inflation Hits Your Savings

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

"The very man who has the deepest interest in sound currency is the man who earns his daily bread by his daily toil."

Daniel Webster said that nearly a century ago. His statement was true in his time, it was true years earlier, and it is true today.

France proved its verity as early as 1795, when currency inflation forced workers and wage-earners to pay the equivalent of $9 for a pound of bread and of $40 for a bushel of potatoes.

Germany proved it shortly after the World War when inflation wiped out utterly the average worker's savings, and sky-rocketed the prices of everything save the barest necessities of life far beyond his reach.

Russia proved it when her revolutionary leaders used inflation to help drag every worker down to a state of regimented and dependent penury.

In every instance currency inflation hurt the worker and helped the speculator. Always it crushes the thrifty and exalts the gambler. How?

It achieves this effect not by reducing the number of dollars in the earner's pay-envelope or savings account or insurance estate, but by reducing the actual purchasing power of those dollars.

It means that out of the same income—or savings—he must pay far more for food and clothes and shelter and everything else he buys.

That's fine for the well-heeled speculator who profits by buying in a low market and selling at inflated prices. But it's hard on the worker—or on his widow and children if he has entrusted their future to insurance or savings funds accounts, as most American wage-earners do.

How can the average worker and citizen escape this menace?

Well, as history has proved, the blight of inflation descends on a nation in one of two ways. It may be adopted deliberately as a method of raising prices. But more often it comes as a result of straining government resources through extravagance and debt.

Force the politicians to eliminate waste and the piling up of public debt—and you remove this threat at the earnings, the savings and the security of every worker and his family.
